Interconnect Systems Receives Nominations for Prestigious Awards

Innovative and Customer Centric Technology Provider Is Recognized for Delivering Solutions That Advance Local Businesses

HUNTSVILLE, AL — January 7, 2009 — Interconnect Systems, an industry leader in business communications, announced today that the company received nominations for two of the business community's most prestigious awards – the Better Business Bureau of North Alabama's Torch Award and Small Business of the Year Award for the Huntsville/Madison County Chamber of Commerce. Nominations for both awards are driven by community leaders that understand the value of Interconnect Systems' innovative and customer centric approach to delivering solutions that advance local businesses.

"It is truly an honor to have been nominated for both awards in 2008," said Harry Lioce, President of Interconnect Systems. "We have been in business a long time and our mission from day one was to first understand our customers' business goals, provide solutions that support their pursuit of these goals, and deliver them in a manner that increases their profitability while giving them a competitive advantage."

More than 120 companies and non-profit organizations were nominated for the Better Business Bureau of North Alabama's Torch

Award and were given the opportunity to submit information regarding their ethical relationships with customers, employees and vendors. A well known panel comprised of representatives of the academic and business community judged the entries. Thirty businesses and organizations accepted their nomination and provided an entry for the Torch Award. In order to have qualified for the Small Business of the Year Award for the Huntsville/Madison County Chamber of Commerce, Interconnect Systems must have met a number of criteria. They included being a locally owned and headquartered in the Huntsville/Madison County area, in good standing with the Better Business Bureau, and been in business prior to December of 2005.

"We have been offering our communications solutions to companies since 1981," added Mr. Lioce. "This is a testament to the type of professionals that we have at Interconnect Systems. Everyone in the organization is focused on satisfying the needs of every customer, dedicated to enhancing their knowledge of technology, and passionate about giving back to our community. Our approach to building a great business has paid off. We're now looking forward to 2009 and continuing to increase our role in helping businesses grow during these challenging economic times."
